

WELCOME TO

Midi-Pyrénées

The majestic Rodez cathedral rises up against the blue sky and mountains. The impressive Pic du Midi calmly surveys the surrounding countryside like a final outpost on the crest of the Pyrenean massif.

This natural barrier, stretching from Catalan Canigou to the Béarn mountains, can be seen from Puylaurens, an ancient Tarn village. Let the spell filter through you as you gaze at a simple sheepecote in the sombre Aubrac mountains or the excitement catch you in the ancient Quercy region when, on a summer night, it is as if Henry Plantagenet was riding out to Rocamadour once again.

This region is steeped in history: fortified villages, such as Saint-Cirq-Lapopie, a Lot citadel, cling to the sides of valleys; untouched nature in Aveyron; the Albi cathedral watching over the Cathar country; Foix, in the Ariège of Gaston Phoebus who made it the most feared town in the Midi; the Bigorre region, a land of proud and rebellious mountain-dwellers.

PROPERTY DETAILS

A beautiful, L-shaped 18thC former Presbytery, sleeping up to 10, with private pool. It is situated in rolling countryside south of Cahors on the borders of Dordogne and Midi-Pyrénées.

FURTHER INFORMATION

Full details of local attractions, restaurants, food shops and services, together with recommendations for golf, riding, canoeing, tennis, fishing, leisure lakes with pedaloes, shopping for foie gras or the renowned wines of Cahors and restaurants will be found at the house, together with a generous welcome pack of wine and essentials.

This corner of Quercy, with its secret valleys, is the real 'France profonde' that those who have endured the traffic jams of Dordogne or Côte d'Azur hot-spots will love. Yet the cathedral cities of Cahors and Montauban, Moissac on the banks of the Tarn, the hill-top towns like Lauzerte dating from the Hundred Years War, Montpezat with its collegiate church, the 3-star Pech Merle and Gouffre de Padirac cave systems can all be visited in half a day.
